First SkyDome, now HotDocs becomes Rogers

MOVIE HOUSE

Another T.O. institution will bear that name
after $5M gift

In the theatre world, they're called "angels," deep-pocketed saviours who swoop in and finance artistic endeavours.

With a gift of $5 million to Hot Docs, the family of the late media mogul Ted Rogers gets their wings and their name on the marquee of the 103-year-old theatre on Bloor St. W., the world's only free-standing documentary movie house.

The gift allows the documentary film festival to move from tenant to owner of its own home, helping safeguard its legacy "in perpetuity," said Hot Docs president Chris McDonald.

The money from the Rogers Foundation, the family's philanthropic fund, is divided into two parts: $4 million is earmarked for the purchase of the building, which will be renamed the Hot Docs Ted Rogers Cinema; and $1 million creates the Hot Docs Ted Rogers Fund. It will be part of Hot Docs' portfolio of production funds that support filmmakers, administered by Hot Docs.

It's a good fit for the Rogers family, who McDonald says are "sort of like Medicis of the documentary world in Canada," significant patrons of the arts.

People use the word "love" rather freely when it comes to documentaries and Hot Docs. That devotion prompted movie producer Neil Tabatnik, partner and cofounder of film and TV company Blue Ice Group, to buy the aging movie house and renovate it to become a stand-alone documentary cinema in Toronto five years ago.

It was that spirit that prompted Tabatnik to propose what McDonald called the "audacious" idea to establish a full-time documentary film house in Toronto.

Tabatnik bought the Bloor Cinema from the Bordonaro family, who had insisted the building live on as a movie theatre. It was leased to Hot Docs, which partnered with Blue Ice Group in 2011 to run it.

Although the theatre was valued at $9 million after its extensive renovation, Tabatnik agreed to sell the building to Hot Docs for $8.4 million.

"He is an angel investor," said McDonald. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Eight towers in hand, developer ready to sculpt Yonge/St. Clair

Steven Goetz
For Metro | Toronto

Big changes are coming to Yonge and St. Clair in what's being called an unprecedented move by a Toronto developer. Slate Asset Management has bought, among others, buildings on all four corners of the intersection.

Over the next two years, the company expects to rebuild the front facades of three banks at the intersection, introducing new retail. On the northwest corner, now home to a convenience store, the company has plans for "a multi-storey iconic restaurant," developer Lucas Manuel told Metro.

Slate Asset started buying property at the "neglected" intersection in 2013, Manuel said. The company's portfolio now includes eight office towers along St. Clair and a number of smaller buildings.

It's believed to be the first time a developer has taken over a major intersection, Ward 21 Coun. Josh Matlow said. And, he said, it's created a unique opportunity to negotiate public-realm improvements without getting bogged down in the specifics of any one site.

"Most developers will just

“There is no reason for it to have languished for so long.”

Lucas Manuel

land in the community and tell everyone what they want from them," he said. "Slate has taken an approach to consult with members of the community and try to assess what is supportable."

Part of Slate's plan is to make the street more inviting for pedestrians and more attractive as a destination. To give the intersection a stronger identity, a massive mural by U.K.-based street artist Phlegm on the side of 1 St. Clair W. will be completed in July.

Manuel said the company is dedicated to building a true neighbourhood.

"There is no reason given its proximity to the core — to Rosedale, Forest Hill, Moore Park and sitting on a subway and streetcar line — for it to have languished for so long," he said.

"There are more than enough people living in this neighbourhood to sustain a lively commercial centre.

"It is true sometimes with condo developers: They're there, they produce something and they exit and sometimes they don't have that long-term vision. That is not our game. We are at Yonge and St. Clair for the long haul."

Police laid 186 criminal, 79 zoning charges in May

A month after police raids on medicinal marijuana dispensaries, dozens continue to sell pot across Toronto including some raided outlets that reopened.

"We understand the liability of what we're doing," says Katey Asaph of Eden Medicinal Society on Queen St. W., which resumed sales to those with proof of an ailment or injury a few days after the May 26 raids that saw staff, including Asaph, hit with Criminal Code drug trafficking charges.

"There will always be a chance (of another raid) going forward, but we continue to remain open to provide a safe and comfortable space so that our clients can rely on us for cannabis access."

Shops like hers are hoping Toronto will license them, following Vancouver's lead. City licensing staff are, however, now advising city council against a licensing regime until Ottawa makes major legal changes.

The same licensing staff participated in the raids which came in response to complaints from homeowners, city councillors and Mayor John Tory. Police raided 43 shops, laying 186 criminal charges and 79 zoning-related charges against 90 people.

But many of the pot shops in Toronto were not raided, including some serving recreational users and others requiring prescriptions or other proof of medical need.

The federal government has vowed to legalize recreational marijuana as early as next year. For medical users, who are sup-

Bowmanville Zoo to close at end of 2016

The Bowmanville Zoo will be closing at the end of the 2016 season, zoo officials said Thursday.

In a news release, zoo officials said the "untrue allegations made by PETA in regards to a tiger incident have created a climate in which the zoo can no longer operate."

Speaking to reporters Thursday afternoon, a spokesman attributed the zoo's lack of recent visitors — and resulting financial problems — to the allegations brought forward by People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

"If people started coming back to the zoo in droves, would that make a difference? Yes. The sort of PR campaign that's been carried out against the zoo by PETA is very effective," said Angus Carroll, the zoo's director of communications.

PETA says it would like to see "every single animal at the Bowmanville zoo to be sent to a reputable sanctuary where they can finally recover from their years of abuse, and get the care they deserve," said Brittany Peet, director of captive animal law enforcement for PETA.

Family vow not to tear down treehouse after losing decision

Swansea's ship-shaped treehouse won't be sailing into the sunset anytime soon.

After a city committee rejected John Alpeza's application to leave his elaborate backyard playhouse alone, the father of two boys has vowed to take the fight to the next level.

It's a fight his neighbours feel "forced" to continue.

"This committee just totally showed no compassion and no consideration for the kids," Alpeza said Thursday after a hearing at the Etobicoke York committee of adjustment.

"This is about the kids. This is not a tool shed or a garage," he added.

Alpeza was appealing to the committee to let his $30,000 treehouse stand as is, despite Brothers Kristian, bottom, and Mateas Alpeza in their pirate ship treehouse.

VINCE TALOTTA/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

a notice from the city in April that it violated zoning bylaws.

Marita Bagdonas, Alpeza's 90-year-old next-door neighbour, has been complaining about the massive playhouse for almost two years. She says the structure blocks the sun, killing her rose garden and foiling her attempts to dry her laundry outside.

After almost an hour of presentations from the families and their lawyers, the committee ultimately ruled the variances were not trivial and unanimously voted against Alpeza's application.

The decision left Alpeza's two young sons heartsick, with 8-year-old Mateas welling up outside the meeting room.

"It's just the worst thing on earth that can ever happen to me. I don't know why anybody would ever want to take it down," said 10-year-old Kristian.

Bagdonas said she was feeling "good" after the decision, though she said the dispute hadn't been weighing on her mind.

"I never was thinking of it all those months. I just was depressed every time I looked at that monster. That's all," Bagdonas said. Her daughter Kate Lawson, who also lives on the Alpezas' street, says she fears they will be "forced" to follow the case to the Ontario Municipal Board now.

"If we don't fight him then he'll get to keep it. So we're forced into it," Lawson told reporters following the decision.

CITY ROLLS OUT VISION

Mayor John Tory announced plans Thursday to re-time traffic signals on 17 routes across the city. The province also announced a new plan to allow solo drivers in high-occupancy toll lanes on the QEW. They're the latest in a series of transit and road-related ideas rolled out over the past couple of weeks, all of which could affect your commute.

May Warren/Metro

EARLY REOPENING OF GARDINER

Tory announced June 15 that all lanes closed for repairs on the Gardiner Expressway will open by June 25, four months ahead of schedule. The city spent $3.4 million to speed up repairs on the western section of the expressway, hoping it can lose its bad reputation as a parking lot.

QEW TOLL LANES

The province will experiment with letting drivers without passengers use high-occupancy toll lanes on the QEW, for a price. A thousand applicants will be chosen in a random draw. It will then cost them $180 to buy permits good for three months this fall. Drivers with two or more people in their vehicles can still use the lanes for free.

SMART TRACK

Tory announced Tuesday that six new GO stations will be built for his SmartTrack transit plan, serving neighbourhoods like Liberty Village and St. Clair Ave. W. Its far fewer than the 22 stops Tory pitched during his campaign, and critics say the mayor's plan is becoming almost identical to an existing transit plan put together by the province.

514 CHERRY

The TTC launched its first new streetcar route in 16 years on Sunday with the 514 Cherry. The route is meant to connect the Distillery District to transit and improve crowding on the King streetcar.

TRAFFIC SIGNAL TIMING

Tory's announcement Thursday focused on fighting gridlock by retiming 357 traffic signals in areas from Lake Shore Blvd. W. to Dupont St. The signals will be updated to meet the new standard that assumes pedestrians can walk 1 metre per second instead of 1.3, so it's a victory for walkers tired of rushing from curb to curb. A pilot project will also try new traffic signal technology on select routes.

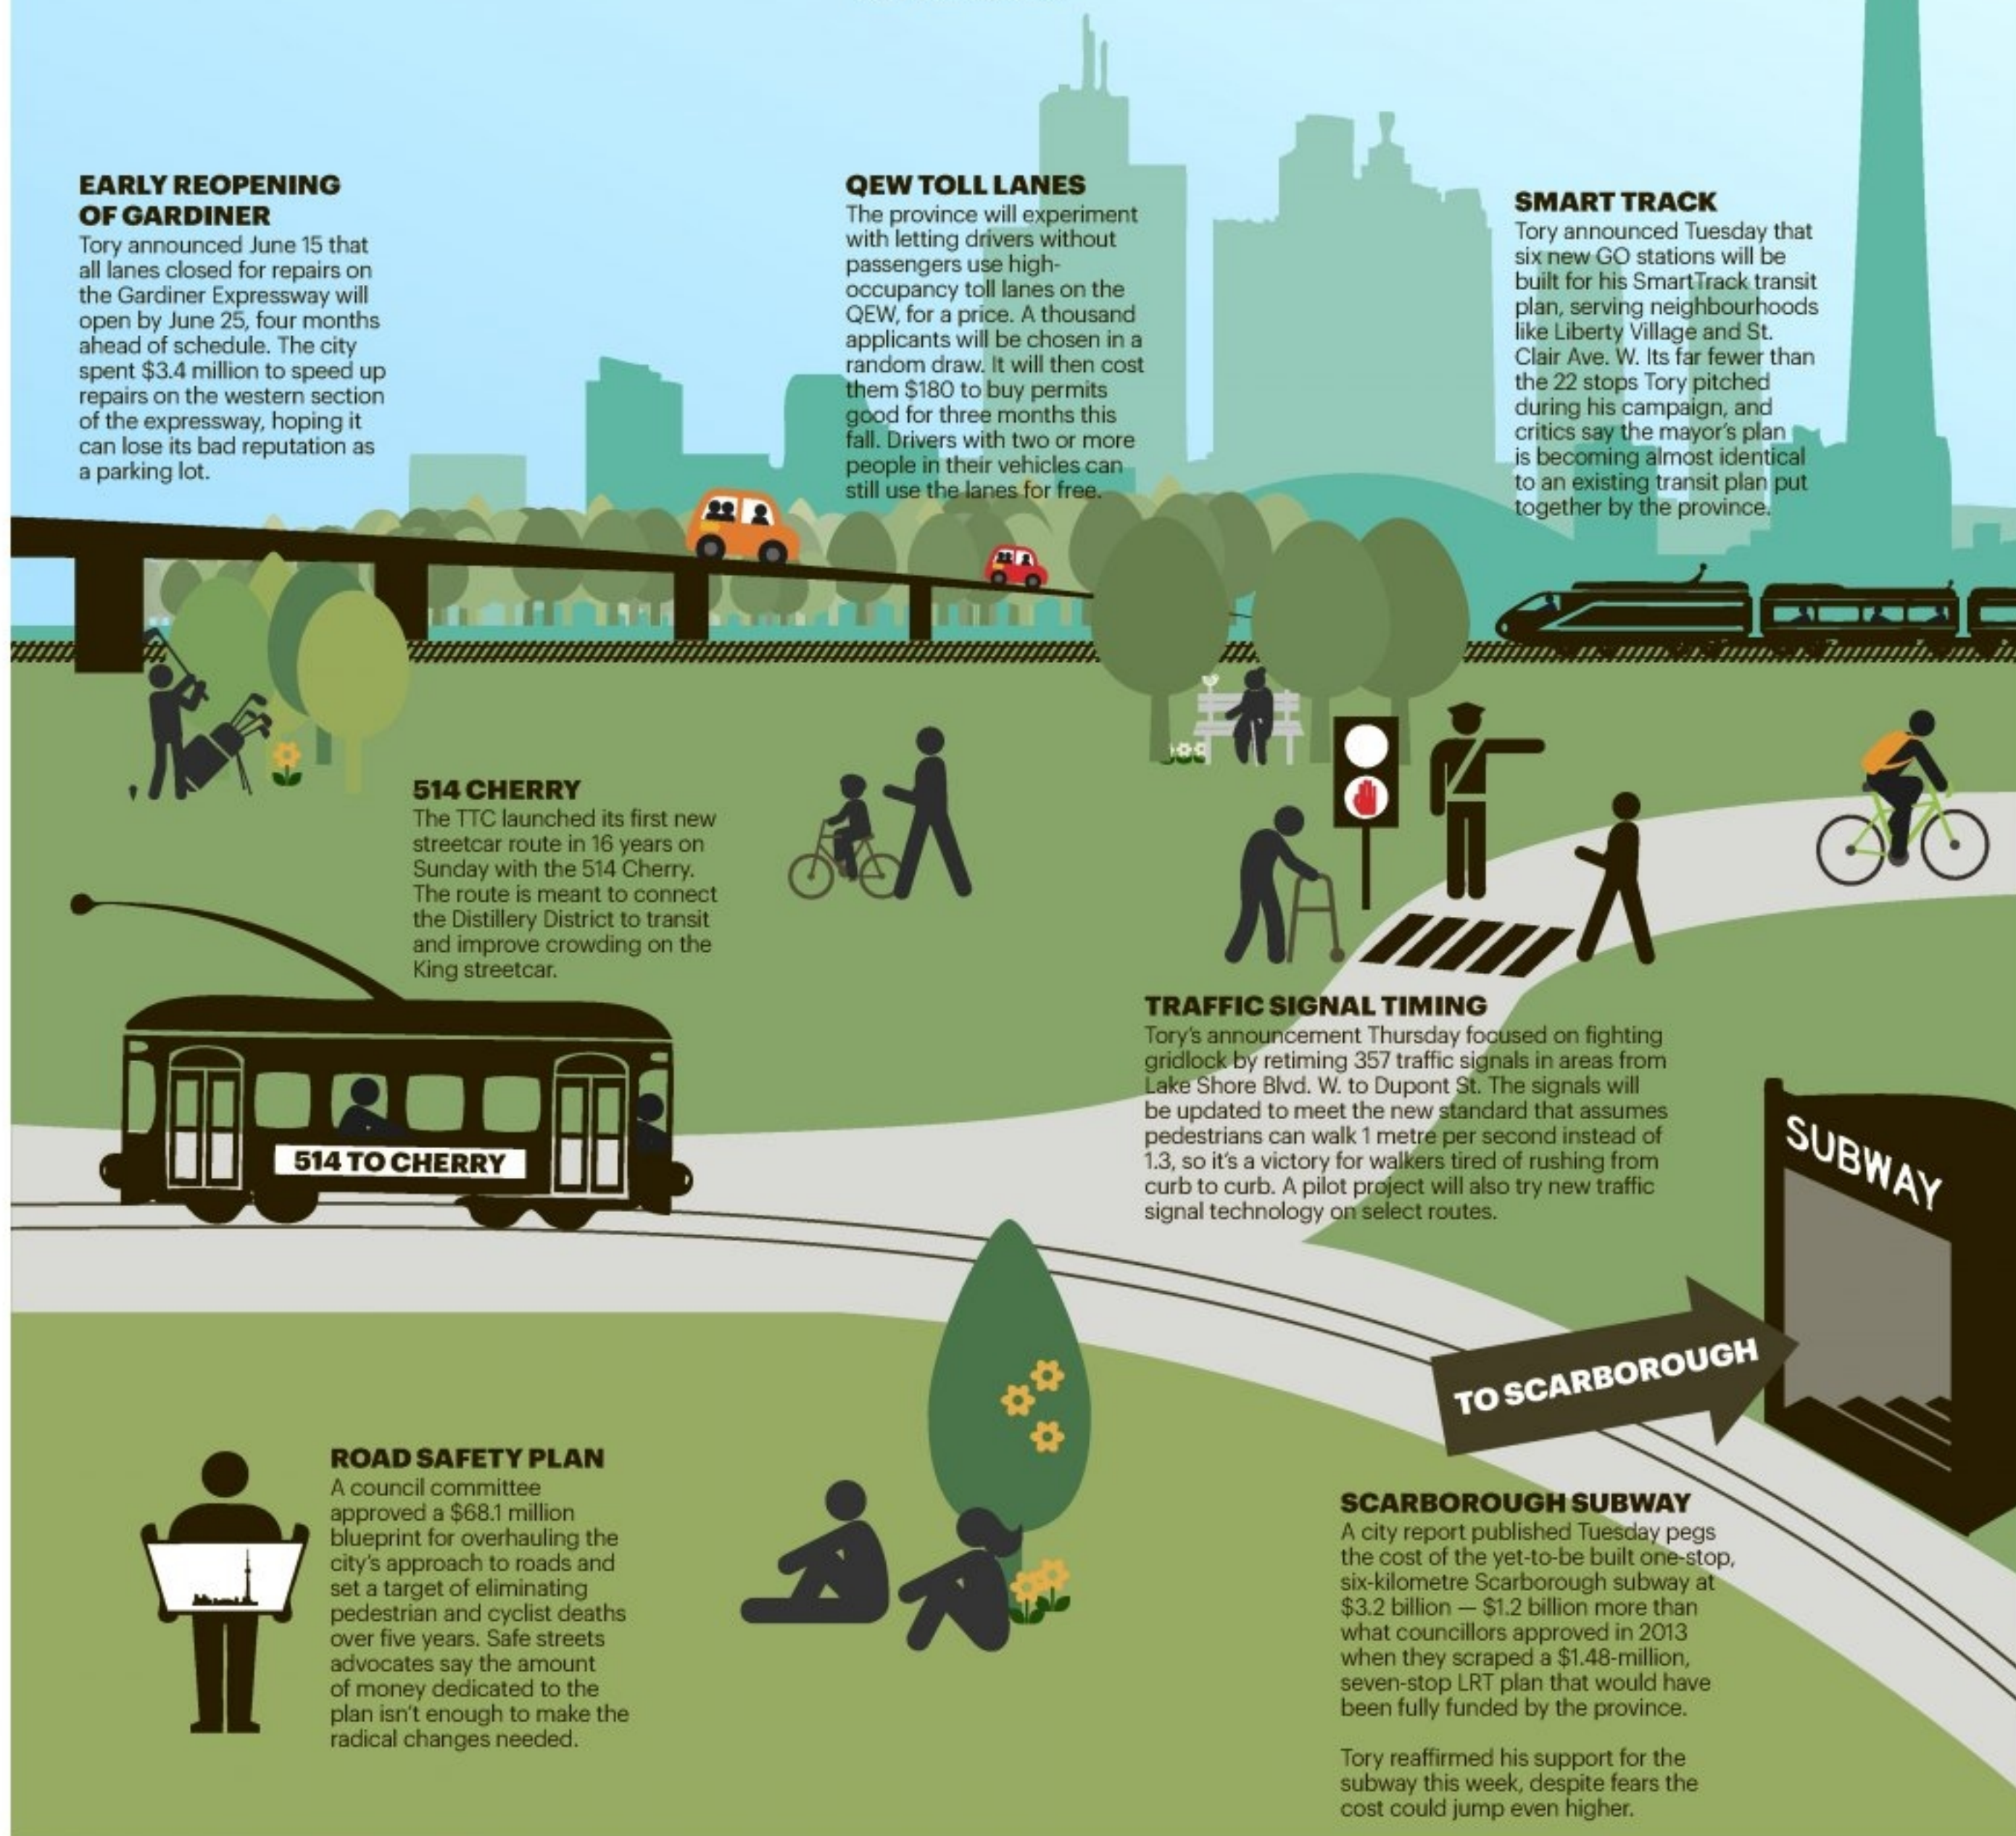

ROAD SAFETY PLAN

A council committee approved a $68.1 million blueprint for overhauling the city's approach to roads and set a target of eliminating pedestrian and cyclist deaths over five years. Safe streets advocates say the amount of money dedicated to the plan isn't enough to make the radical changes needed.

SCARBOROUGH SUBWAY

A city report published Tuesday pegs the cost of the yet-to-be built one-stop, six-kilometre Scarborough subway at $3.2 billion — $1.2 billion more than what councillors approved in 2013 when they scrapped a $1.48-million, seven-stop LRT plan that would have been fully funded by the province.

Tory reaffirmed his support for the subway this week, despite fears the cost could jump even higher.

Putting a new perspective on Pride

Pride week — which starts Friday — has taken on a new meaning for many because of the recent deaths of 49 people at the Pulse Nightclub in Orlando. Metro asked Torontonians to reflect on the meaning of Pride in 2016, and whether this year's festival will be different than in years past. Their answers were as diverse as Pride itself.

Luke Simcoe
Metro | Toronto

"It's different for me because I have a girlfriend. I just came out as bi a year and a half ago and we started dating two months ago. Now I have someone to celebrate with, which I didn't have before."

Ky Cochran

"Pride feels different because of Orlando. Back in the early days, people were dropping dead of AIDS. I'm finding the experience of the massacre in Orlando has brought back those memories."

Randy Yates

"I think Pride will have a greater sense of camaraderie and a greater sense of community. I'm looking forward to experiencing it for the first time."

Sean Murray

"Everyone's going to be thinking about it and having a little bit more gratitude and awareness of the luck that we have to be in Canada, where there's a little less risk of something like Orlando happening."

Asia Aoki

"I think that it should still be a celebration. It should still be welcoming and happy. We are sad about it, but we owe it to ourselves to celebrate and to show each other that we're safe here."

Jennifer Colarusso

"Here, we have more pride in having Pride. As a citizen of Toronto, I don't mind at all, I'm open to that and accept it, and I think a lot of places outside of Toronto should accept that as well."

Christian Del Rio

"It definitely feels heavy. Past Prides have been fun and political, but this year feels more raw and more real. It reminds us that the fight isn't over, and it's actually just beginning for some people."

Local musicians aiming to bring classical genre to the masses

Booze and tacos. Organizers behind a new concert series are hoping that tasty delights can prove key to attracting a younger audience to classical chamber music.

Talisa and Naomi Blackman are behind ClassyAF, a weekly chamber music concert taking over La Revolution Mexican restaurant and bar in July.

Younger Torontonians see classical music as "stodgy and boring" and the concert hall as less fun than going out to the bar, Naomi said.

"They think they have to go to something a bit fancier to see classical music, so we want to give an opportunity to hear great classical in a different environment."

The program features shorter pieces than a typical symphony performance, with songs people will recognize from other genres.

Shows will feature jazz standards interpreted on violin and piano, cellists covering Canadian rock staples, and popular songs from the scores of West Side Story and Fantasia.

The daughters of musicians, Talisa and Naomi grew up in a house filled with classical music. It wasn't until they got older — now 29 and 27 — that they realized how atypical their musical tastes were among their age group.

this city to bring the music we love and perform into the spaces we frequent normally in our lives," Talisa said. "There is so much incredible classical talent in Toronto it shouldn't be confined to just the major concert halls."

The sisters say concertgoers won't be silenced or shamed for clapping between movements or ordering a drink during the show.

But will there be dancing?

"That would be amazing," Talisa said. "If you're grooving in your seat, that's definitely the goal. These are definitely tunes people will leave humming."

5 THINGS ABOUT THE CN TOWER'S HISTORY

The CN Tower turns 40 years old this Sunday. But, even the city's most well known landmark has some lesser-known facts.

Chris Bateman
For Metro | Toronto

1 Part of bigger development

First proposed in the late 1960s, Metro Centre was the biggest thing never to happen to downtown. The massive $1 billion redevelopment proposal was supposed to revitalize a swath of surplus Canadian Pacific and Canadian National railway land south of Front Street with a mix of residential and commercial buildings, offices and a massive new transit centre. The CN Tower — first billed as a CBC communications tower — was supposed to be the centrepiece of the project, which was mostly cancelled in the 1970s.

2 CN pitched the tower based on different design

When the tower was first unveiled in model form in 1968, it was made up of three separate towers clustered together and linked via walkways. At ground level was a new CBC headquarters. In addition to an observation deck, the proto-CN Tower was to house VHF and UHF television as well as FM and AM radio transmitters.

3 Several things dropped from final blueprints

Though the ground level has recently been enlivened by the addition of the Ripley's aquarium, the design at the time of construction called for parkland, trees, landscaped terraces and a large reflecting pool at the tower's base. Shops and restaurants were supposed to be built into the terraces and the whole area marketed as a buzzing tourist destination. None of these features were completed.

PHOTOS: CITY OF TORONTO ARCHIVES

4 There were concerns about height

The elegant proportions of the CN Tower were a complete accident. The height was chosen “arbitrarily” based on the needs of the TV and radio transmitters, according to N. J. MacMillan, CN chairman and president in the '70s, but it still proved a problem with some government officials. Fearing the deaths of migratory birds, even a possible plane crash, Alderman and future mayor John Sewell tried to have the tower reduced by 300 metres — roughly two-thirds of its height — in 1973. However, Federal Transport Minister Jean Marchand said studies proved the tower safe for aviation.

5 A helicopter got stuck to the tower

With all 41,000 cubic metres of CN Tower concrete in place, the final stage of construction — assembly of the white painted steel broadcasting antenna — commenced in February 1974. While preparing to install the rooftop structure, a 10-ton Sikorsky helicopter named Olga accidentally became tethered to the tower when a crane it was disassembling became jammed in place. Workers were able to free the aircraft just before it ran out of fuel.

Mike Duffy still on hook for expenses

POLITICS

Senator was previously acquitted on 31 charges

The interminable spectre of the Mike Duffy spending scandal reared its ugly head yet again Thursday as the Senate found itself once more locked in a battle with the controversial senator over dubious expenses.

This time, however, the expenses in question were from claims well-canvassed during Duffy's criminal trial, which ended earlier this year in his sensational acquittal on 31 charges of fraud, breach of trust and bribery.

In that acquittal, Ontario Court Judge Charles Vaillancourt excoriated the Senate for spending rules that lacked clarity and oversight, allowing senators to claim expenses for anything related to what they deemed Senate business.

The Senate committee that polices spending has asked Duffy to repay seven of his claims totalling $16,955, despite last April's court decision. It marks the first time since late March that a senator has been asked to reimburse questionable spending — an order Duffy is fighting and could soon be entitled to take up with a special arbitrator. The arbitration process was originally set up to handle disputes arising from a federal audit of Senate spending — a review that missed Duffy initially, because he was under RCMP investigation and

That 2013 audit looked only at his housing expenses and ended with a Senate committee ordering Duffy to repay $90,000, which he did after then-prime minister Stephen Harper's chief of staff, Nigel Wright, gave him the cash in order to take away a potential political headache for the Conservative government.

Pilots pull off daring rescue

Two people who fell ill while working at the U.S. research station at the South Pole have been evacuated by a Canadian-owned Twin Otter turboprop plane that made the daring rescue flight in Antarctica's harsh winter.

The National Science Foundation said the two workers arrived safely late Wednesday in Punta Arenas, the southernmost city in Chile, after a long trip from the Amundsen-Scott station at the South Pole. They stopped for a few hours at a British station on the edge of Antarctica to be put on another plane.

"From Punta Arenas, the two patients aboard will be transported to a medical facility that can provide a level of care that is not available at Amundsen-Scott," said a statement from the National Science Foundation.

The foundation runs Amundsen-Scott and two other centres in Antarctica. It did not identify the sick workers or give their conditions, citing medical privacy.

At Magallanes Clinic in Punta Arenas, nurse Mauricio Seron said that a female patient "with a gastric problem" was the sicker of the two.

All eyes on Brexit results

The world watched with bated breath as the polls closed Thursday in Britain's historic referendum on membership in the European Union. Throughout the night, results were too close to call. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Britain's referendum on whether to leave the European Union was too close to call early Friday, with increasingly mixed signals challenging earlier indications that "remain" had won a narrow victory.

The British pound soared after two leading supporters of the "leave" campaign said it appeared the pro-EU side had won, then plummeted as Britain's first counting areas reported their results. The stage was set for a nerve-racking night of ballot-counting after a day of high turnout and foul weather.

"It may be possible that the experts are going to have egg on their face later on tonight," University of Strathclyde political scientist John Curtice told the BBC after results from Newcastle showed worse-than-expected figures for pro-European vote. "It may be the first sign that the 'remain' side are not going to do as well as those early polls suggested."

A vote to leave the EU would destabilize the 28-nation trading bloc, created from the ashes of the Second World War to keep the peace in Europe. A "remain" vote would nonetheless leave Britain divided and the EU scrambling to reform.

As the polls closed Thursday, U.K. Independence Party leader Nigel Farage set a downbeat tone for the supporters of a British exit — or Brexit — from the EU, telling Sky News television "it looks like 'remain' will edge it" in the referendum.

But he walked back those comments in later, telling reporters at a "leave" party in London that "maybe just under half, maybe just over half of the country" had voted to pull Britain out of the EU.

Pollster Ipsos MORI said a survey on Wednesday and Thursday suggested the "remain" side would win by a margin of 54 per cent to 46 per cent.

The overseas territory of Gibraltar was first with results late Thursday, and as expected reported an overwhelming vote for "remain" — 96 per cent.

There as elsewhere, turnout appeared high. Officials in

+ FIRST RESULTS

- England's working-class northeast returned a smaller-than-expected "remain" win of 50.7 per cent in Newcastle and a bigger-than-expected "leave" vote of 61 per cent in nearby Sunderland.
- In Wales, the first four results showed 54 per cent in favour of "leave."
- Northern Ireland's first five voting areas were all for "remain."
- The "remain" vote was ahead in Scotland, although turnout there was below average.

Gibraltar said almost 84 per cent of eligible voters cast ballots. High turnout was expected to boost the "remain" vote, because "leave" supporters are thought to be more motivated. But high turnout in working-class areas that typically have lower tallies could also boost the "leave" vote.

How Canada may be impacted

If the U.K. leaves the European Union, the news could hit Canadians on a number of fronts: Fewer exports: Finance Minister Bill Morneau says Canadian businesses that invested in the U.K. to access the European market may be forced to rethink their strategies. Canada could also lose out on some of the benefits of the Comprehensive Economic and Trade Agreement, the country's trade agreement with the EU.

Lower returns: Mark Carney, governor of the Bank of England, has warned that a Brexit could trigger financial instability in the country. That's bad news for Canadians with investments in the U.K. Canadians invested almost $69 billion in the U.K. in 2014, according to Statistics Canada. Stronger U.S. dollar: A Brexit could throw the British economy into turmoil, weakening the pound against the U.S. dollar. U.S. Federal Reserve chair Janet Yellen warned that a hike to the dollar could slow the U.S. economy by discouraging trade. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

U.S. Democrats end sit-in after 25 hours

GUN CONTROL

Republicans refuse to give in to calls for tighter rules

Exhausted but exuberant, House Democrats vowed to fight on for gun control Thursday as they ended their high-drama House floor sit-in with songs, prayers and defiant predictions of success. Republicans offered a dose of political reality, denying House Democratic demands and holding a Senate vote designed to show a bipartisan gun compromise can't pass.

"They're trying to get on TV," House Speaker Paul Ryan complained in an angry denunciation of the Democrats' 25-hour occupation of the Capitol chamber. Ryan said the House would not be giving in to Democrats' calls for votes on legislation expanding background checks for gun buyers and keeping people on the no-fly list from getting guns in the wake of the Orlando shooting.

Yet while they may have lost the legislative battles at hand, Democrats on both sides of the Capitol were congratulating themselves on a remarkable success in gaining attention for their demands for action to curb the widespread availability of firearms, first by a 15-hour Senate filibuster last week and then with their extraordinary occupation of the House floor.

That latest effort broke up around midday Thursday after going through the night, even after Ryan moved up the Fourth of July recess and gavelled a chaotic House out of session in the early morning hours.

On Thursday Democrats streamed onto the steps of the East Front of the Capitol, where cheering crowds welcomed them. Rep. John Lewis of Georgia, the civil rights icon who helped lead the sit-in, urged the crowd not to give up and to vote in the fall elections.

"The fight is not over. This is just one step" Lewis declared.

FREDDIE GRAY CASE

No evidence of crime: Judge

A judge explained why he found a police driver not guilty in the death of Freddie Gray, a 25-year-old black man whose neck was broken on the way to the station: He didn't see any evidence of a crime.

Baltimore Judge Barry Williams ruled Thursday that the state failed to prove Officer Caesar Goodson committed murder, manslaughter, assault, reckless endangerment or misconduct in office.

Goodson was the only one of the six officers charged in Gray's death to be accused of murder.

He's the second to be found not guilty.

Another officer's case ended in a mistrial.

The judge said Goodson

wouldn't have been able to determine whether Gray was injured between the second and fifth stops on the 45-minute trip, because only after the van finally arrived at the Western District station house did officers observe Gray with blood and saliva on his face, and evidence that he'd become incontinent, Williams said.

DECODED Sports injuries

WHAT'S THE DEAL WITH TURF TOE?

Toronto Blue Jays star Jose Bautista lost a fight with a solid wall at the edge of the outfield during a game against the Phillies in Philadelphia last week. He smashed right into it, foot first, and was diagnosed with turf toe. He earned himself a 15-day disability leave and has to wear a walking boot.

What is turf toe anyways? We explain.

TOETALLY SERIOUS

The big toe (or, to use medical lingo, the great toe or Hallux) is one of the leading sources of athletic injuries. Without a functioning big toe, an athlete can lose "push-off strength" — aka Bautista's ability to sail off of first base. In nastier cases, without effective treatment, such an injury can eventually lead to deformity, chronic pain or joint degeneration (arthritis).

PINK HILLS

It's not as delicious as it sounds: Watermelon Snow is the nickname given the pink algae blooming across the European Arctic. Rose-hued snow reflects 13 per cent less sunlight than the white stuff. That makes the ground and air heat up more, creating slushy puddles — the algae's favourite habitat. And so begins a vicious cycle.

DIETER'S DREAM

Chocolate with less than 36 per cent fat doesn't melt nicely and tends to clog factory machines. But a new study shows jolting low-fat chocolate with electricity helps it flow, creating a tasty candy with 10 per cent less fat.

Can math prove aliens are real (or not?)

My friend Chris says it's mathematically proven that aliens exist. Is that legit?
— Megan, Ottawa

Chris's view that extraterrestrials — complex, intelligent aliens — exist now, or have existed at some point, is no longer fringe.

When I learned about the planets in our solar system in school, scientists weren't sure any others existed. NASA has since confirmed more than 3,000 exoplanets outside the orbit of the sun but still in our immediate celestial neighbourhood. More than 200 are temperate and earth-like. That's what we can see with our rudimentary technology.

The Milky Way is home to an estimated hundred billion planets. In the May edition of Astrobiology, University of Rochester astrophysicist Adam Frank and colleagues crunched the numbers and concluded, "While we do not know if any advanced extraterrestrial civilizations currently exist in our galaxy, we now have enough information to conclude that they almost certainly existed at some point." He put the odds our galaxy has never hosted intelligent life other than our own at one in a septillion (that's a 1 with 24 zeroes). But not so fast. We have no idea how unusual the phenomenon of life is in the universe — particularly complex, multicellular life.

The event that created complex cells like animals and plants happened, as far as we know, just once in the three-billion-year history of life on Earth. We don't know if that's less or more often than what would be expected by chance. And it's only been 13.7 billion years since the Big Bang.

It's reasonable to assume that a great portion of the extraterrestrial life that's out there, if there is any, is single-celled and looks something like pond scum.

To quote Atlantic magazine editor Ross Anderson, "Fancy math can't make aliens real."

Superheroes save your world

PSYCHOLOGY

Apocalyptic plot lines help audiences deal with stress

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

In today's world it's not enough to be a hero. Now you must be a superhero. Liberating a cat from a tree or performing the Heimlich manoeuvre is considered HeroLite™.

Unlike the old days when square-jawed movie stars rescued damsels in distress or battled cold-hearted landlords, today's champions won't get out of bed for anything less than the threat of complete world annihilation.

This weekend the heroes of Independence Day: Resurgence join Mystique, Quicksilver, Leonardo, Raphael, Michelangelo, Donatello, Captain America and legendary do-gooders Batman and Superman in some good, old-fashioned world saving.

The 20-years-in-the-making sequel to Will Smith's mega-hit sees aliens from outside the Solar System attack our planet. It's life and death on a planetary scale.

It's not a surprise the stories are getting larger and louder. Audiences want a big bang for their buck and Hollywood is pleased to oblige with high-stakes situations that provide frenetic action and happy endings (unless, of course you're rooting for the bad guy).

These days Hollywood also looks to overseas markets for mega-revenue and presenting globe-spanning stories helps to attract crowds in other countries. Business aside, why have audiences embraced world-on-the-brink movies?

Films, says Dr. Norman Holland, Marston-Milbauer Eminent Scholar Emeritus at the University of Florida, work on different parts of your brain.

"The parts that turn off are the parts that plan action because you're not going to act on what you see on the screen in front of you," he says.

"You accept the most improbable things, like Stars Wars or Spider-Man or whatever.

"At the same time the lower centres of your brain are generating emotions like mad in response to what you're seeing. This is the peculiar phenomenon that you can feel and care about these people on the screen while at the same time knowing they are nothing but a fiction."

In these heroic tales good almost always wins out, a comforting antidote to the nightly news where stories often don't have happy endings. It makes us feel good, but, as Dr. Holland notes, it's also restful.

"As you know they are re-designing movie theatres with recliner chairs so you can sleep through the movie," he says.

"Yes, it is relaxing. This is the part of your brain that worries, that plans for the future, that is concerned about the state of your body.

"All that shuts down. It's restful, no question."

Going to the movies is restful? Good for us? Seems like in our busy, stressful world it's the films that are the heroes, not the characters.

Why Tickled is no laughing matter

SCANDAL

Filmmakers face threats for exposing secret world

Richard Crouse
For Metro Canada

The amiable David Farrier doesn't want to be talking to me right now. The New Zealand director was in our hemisphere to chat up his documentary Tickled.

"I wish I wasn't doing this now," he says.

"I wish there was no trailer. I wish there was no reviews. I wish people could hear about this thing called Tickled, a film about the sport of competitive endurance tickling and say, 'I've got nothing on, let's go to the movies and see what happens.' That's the dream. I wanted people to feel like they were on the same what the f—? journey I was with (co-director) Dylan Reeve when we made the film."

The story of Tickled begins when Farrier, a self-described

David Farrier, left, and Dylan Reeve (standing), the filmmakers behind Tickled. Farrier set out to make a documentary about competitive tickling, but what he found was much more nefarious. Below: A box of tickling implements. CONTRIBUTED

"light fluffy journalist," came across a strange tickling video on the internet.

Thinking it would make a good story he contacted the makers of the video requesting an interview.

"I'm always trying to find a story no one has seen before," he says.

"I've been doing this for 10 years now and it's harder and harder to do that because everyone on Facebook is sharing the craziest things. But when I came across this tickling video alarm bells went off. You've got these young, model-esque men in bright Adidas clothes in a stark white room. One of them is tied down with shackles and they're tickling and having a great time.

"It jumped out at me because I genuinely thought it must be some sort of Adidas sponsored (video). I thought it was legit. It wasn't shot on a cell phone. It wasn't shot in someone's bedroom. It was shot in a studio and that costs money to rent. Aesthetically, it grabbed me."

When the video maker was slow to respond via email Farrier contacted them through a public Facebook page and that is when the story got weird, troubling and took on the aura of a thriller. Imagine Michael Clayton with tickling and you get the idea.

The documentary sheds light in the dark corners of competitive endurance tickling.

There's alleged cyberbullying, blackmail and catfishing involved as Farrier takes viewers deeper into the subject matter.

"This company does so many strange things," Farrier says of the outfit that hosts the endurance tickling contests.

"I have to talk about it in obscure language. I'm sure you understand. Part of it is the game.

"They love tickling but, as it came out, they love bullying and abusing and derailing lives as well. When I came along I was another target."

Farrier says being the subject of threatening lawsuits didn't concern him too much.

"It's been two years now and I am so used to threats. Other things keep me up at night. Also, I'm an entertainment journalist from New Zealand. I don't have money."

But the documentary subjects have been persistent. At the Los Angeles premiere last Friday, two men who feature in the documentary — David D'Amato and Kevin Clarke — confronted Reeve (Farrier was not at the premiere) and accused the pair of using recorded material they had agreed was off the record.

The circumstance that inspired his documentary is "an unusual thing," says Farrier.

"Hopefully those who come along will learn the simple lesson that not everything is as it seems," he says.

"If you are engaged in anything on the internet, look into it before you dive in. On a slightly cheesy level, just be yourself."

"If you are into something, as long as you're not hurting anyone, be loud and proud about it."

"Try and have that confidence."

"We're living in 2016 and we have a long way to go but if you can, try and be yourself, it will help you. Repression is bad."

Refn takes on new angles, and demons

INTERVIEW

Director continues to reinvent fetish genre in neon nightmare

Chris Alexander
For Metro Canada

Danish director Nicolas Winding Refn is by his own admission a "fetish filmmaker."

This is not to say that his movies are choked with too-tight-corsets, PVC cat suits, 12-inch stiletto heels and riding crops, though you certainly might find these objects of erotic fixation littered about his pictures. No, the enfant terrible of the arthouse defines the term "fetish" in a much more singular way.

"To me, being a fetish filmmaker simply means I shoot what I want to see," Refn says.

Refn's latest fever dream is a slow-burning supernova of style-gone-sinister, an opulent wallow in the feral underbelly of the L.A. fashion model industry that serves as an excuse for Refn to saturate the screen with arch femininity, color, glitter and blood. Lots and lots of blood.

In it, actress Elle Fanning plays Jesse, a naïve waif who appears in Hollywood in search of a fantasy and instead finds a monstrous cabal of parasites who feed off her energy, literally and figuratively. Her transformation from an innocent to a sociopathic zombie plays out like a perversion of The Wizard Of Oz by way of Suspiria and is a film perhaps only Refn could have made.

"I shot it all in chronological order," Refn admits.

"So, I was kind of figuring it out as I went. It quickly began to become apparent that it was more exciting to me to have this dual relationship between Jesse and herself. You know, on one hand she can be this deer in the headlights and then, on another hand, she can be an evil Dorothy. I think there are clues in the movie to this transformation that pop up again and again and again."

The Neon Demon grew organically out of a previously announced project, a horror film called I Walk With The Dead that was intended to reunite the director with his Drive star Carey Mulligan. But, in true fetish filmmaker fashion, Refn's attentions began to drift in pre-production and soon, he switched gears and began fixating on making a darker, more abstract sort of shocker.

"(The Neon Demon) kind of jumped out of that project and became something else," says the director.

"I switched interests, which usually happens with me. I wanted to make something different, so I took all of my original ideas that I liked from the first film concept and continued evolving it and adding to it. It became The Neon Demon, naturally."

"I ultimately make inexpensive movies and this is so I can completely control them. Nicolas Winding Refn"

Elle Fanning plays a wannabe model turned sociopathic zombie in The Neon Demon.

Self-taught Kiwi auteur schools industry in cool

INTERNATIONAL FILM

Hunt for the Wilderpeople is Waititi's latest unique film

Steve Gow
For Metro Canada

The name Taika Waititi may not be a household name in Canada, but he's still the second most famous filmmaker from New Zealand.

In a country that has spawned such luminaries as Jane Campion (The Piano), Waititi sits only behind Lord of the Rings-helmer Peter Jackson as the island nation's most successful auteur with smash hits Boy and this year's Hunt for the Wilderpeople.

In fact, the latter (which opens in Canada Friday) has earned more than The Jungle Book and Deadpool combined at the Kiwi box office. Not bad for a guy who never even attended film school.

"I went to school and hated that and went to university and hated that. By the end I went, 'I'm never going to go to an institution to learn anything,'" laughed Waititi recently from Australia.

Teaching himself the trade, the 40-year-old understands a movie set is full of experts to rely on.

"That's what I do. I still don't know all the names of the gear on a film set."

I'm very relaxed about it. I don't know if that's a bad thing. Maybe you're supposed to be really stressed out when you do these things.

Taika Waititi

If Waititi is joking, it's certainly not the first time. As longtime pals of Jemaine Clement, he got his start collaborating on the comedian's HBO series Flight of the Conchords before moving into features with quirky 2007 rom-com Eagle vs Shark.

Nearly a decade later and the 40-year-old has uncovered success at home and been headhunted by Hollywood to direct Marvel's forthcoming superhero blockbuster Thor: Ragnarok.

"I'm very relaxed about it," admitted Waititi. "I don't know if that's a bad thing. Maybe you're supposed to be really stressed out when you do these things."

But Waititi is full of natural confidence and optimism. In fact, it's something that's clear in his catalogue of affirming films focused on underdogs.

In the case of Wilderpeople, he pairs a defiant teen and his crusty foster uncle in an '80's-inspired

Waititi took his time writing the script and making this film—more than a decade. CONTRIBUTED romp through the New Zealand wilderness.

"I've become less stressed out about everything," reflected Waititi about his growth behind the camera, an epiphany that became obvious filming Wilderpeople.

"I remember sitting out in the elements and it was freezing (and I) realized my job is making people say lines and pretend to be emotional while standing on a mountain. It really is the coolest job!"

Filmmaker Taika Waititi says he still doesn't know the names of all the gear on set. CONTRIBUTED

"It works well geographically compared to the Lannisters," who all speak with what's called Received Pronunciation — the standard British accent associated with posh southerners.

While most GoT actors do hail from the U.K., many are ation, says Fleming. Listen closely and you'll hear him distinctively halt his speech after nearly every phrase.

Ser Davos

Ser Davos Seaworth is played by Irish-born Liam Cunningham "who has a very thick Irish accent," says Fleming. He is "one of the only people on the show who puts on a Geordie accent, which is from Newcastle ... right up in the northeast, near the Scottish border."

Landing during the first couple of seasons, he spoke something that was quite close to Received Pronunciation. As soon as he left King's Landing, you started to hear more of his Irish qualities."

Ygritte

Fleming tells us actress Rose Leslie is actually Scottish nobility, who was educated in England. Her natural speech is fairly English, "but she puts on that very quintessential northern English accent" for the role.

Petyr Baelish, a.k.a Little Finger

Aiden Gillan plays the former Master of Coin and brothel keeper everyone loves to hate. "He's Irish," notes Fleming, "but in The Wire, he spoke with perfect general American, even a little bit tinged with Baltimore."

Oberyn Martell

The Martell's accent is "a little bit Spanish, and a little bit Arabic and so it gives it this kind of Northern African feel. It fits with the design elements they're going with" for Dorne, Fleming says.

TV TOURISM

With the season coming to an end, relive GoT in Croatia

Vawn Himmelsbach
For Metro Canada

At the War Photo exhibit in Dubrovnik, there's an image that stands out: a sweeping staircase, eerily deserted during shelling that destroyed more than 60 per cent of the medieval walled city after Croatia declared independence from Yugoslavia in 1991.

Two decades on, and this UNESCO heritage site has been restored to its former glory as the jewel of the Adriatic. And that staircase — now packed with tourists taking selfies — is known to millions of people around the world: It's where Cersei Lannister begins her "walk of shame" on Game of Thrones.

The TV series — based on the fantasy novels A Song of Ice and Fire and distributed by HBO — is filmed in multiple locations, from Iceland to Ireland, Morocco and Spain. In season one, the fictional fortified port city of King's Landing was filmed in Malta, but has now made its home in Dubrovnik (my GoT guide tells me it's because of significant tax breaks offered in Croatia).

But it's more than that. Sure, there's a lot of CGI in GoT — like dragons, White Walkers and such — but it wasn't hard to transform Dubrovnik into the stronghold of the Lannister family, which uses the city's existing medieval fortifications, guard towers and narrow streets to double as King's Landing. They're the real deal.

This staircase in Dubrovnik's Old Town was used as the starting point for Cersei Lannister's walk of shame on the season five finale of Game of Thrones. PHOTOS BY VAWN HIMMELSBACH

Like this staircase, where Cersei begins her walk of shame in "Mother's Mercy." Just add an angry crowd, a High Sparrow and a naked Cersei — and voilà.

In fact, actress Lena Headey, who was pregnant at the time, used a body double for this scene, though she did multiple takes to act out the facial expressions — and, through the magic of post-production, her head appears on the body double.

Several key scenes were filmed in the Old Town: at the Pile and Ploče gate, on St. Dominika street and along the city walls. Wander the streets and you might stumble upon Littlefinger's brothel, or walk in Daenerys' footsteps around Minčeta Tower where she disappears into the House of the Undying in Qarth.

Dubrovnik's Fort Lavrijenac was a stand-in for the Red Keep, and a number of scenes were filmed here, including the tournament thrown in honour of King Joffrey's name day and the spot where The Hound saves Sansa from being raped.

Not only do you get a stunning view of the Adriatic Sea from atop Fort Lavrijenac, you'll also notice a parking lot on a dramatic rocky outcropping. Sure, it's a cool spot for a parking lot, but it's also where Joffrey's wedding/death scene was shot.

The nearby Island of Lokrum was used for scenes in Qarth. And Arboretum Trsteno — a renaissance garden dating back to the 15th century — doubles as the gardens of King's Landing. They're relatively untouched by CGI; you almost expect Varys to walk around the corner.

Dubrovnik isn't the only Croatian location used in GoT, though. Split, further north on the Dalmatian coast, doubles as Meereen. Within Split's historic Diocletian's Palace, several scenes were filmed: from the dungeon where Tyrion unchains Daenerys' dragons to the spot where Ser Barristan is slain.

Head into the countryside to the ruins of Klis Fortress and you'll easily recognize the road to Meereen, where Daenerys freed the slaves and, later, crucified the masters. The fortress has a history just as interesting as a fictional story: ask your GoT guide about the "sky toilet."

Wandering through Croatia's historic sites, it may feel like you're on the set of GoT (there's even a replica of the iron throne on Lokrum). But while the night may be dark and full of terrors, Croatia is anything but.

The united states of BBQ-ing

ROAD TRIP

Love of meat, rubs and sauces crosses any political divides

David Bateman
For Torstar News Service

I thought barbecue was simple. Buy meat, heat meat, eat meat.

After nine weeks in the U.S., I realize how wrong I had been. From state to state and city to city, the meat, rub, sauce, sides, wood and cooking method change drastically. There is only one constant. From presidents to paupers, nothing brings Americans of all creeds and colours together quite like barbecue.

First stop: Detroit, Mich., where Slows Bar BQ stands like a glowing ember of success among a desolate bed of charcoal. Here, and across the Midwest, sauce is everything.

"Anyone can barbecue, not many places can do you a good sauce," says customer and Detroit native Brandon Johnson. His father's recipe is the glue that bonds his family. "Before any event, my cousins make sure my dad is on the grill before they come."

I drive south through the golden-ombre crop fields of Ohio to laidback Louisville, Ky., where I meet dungaree-clad Smoketown USA owner Eric Gould, the selfbranded "Redneck Jew," so-called for his religion and love of hunting. "The Johnsons taught me how to barbecue. They were wonderful neighbours," says the pitmaster with wispy white side-burns that resemble tiny clouds.

At 20, 46-year-old Gould suffered a brain aneurysm and had been given a two per cent chance to live. "I'm here because I believe in myself and I love people. Life is about how you treat people. I love them. That's my secret ingredient."

After six hours in a very high-heat wood-fired smoker, Gould's pork ribs (he also does beef) are so succulent and tearable I can leave teeth marks in the bone.

My next rack of pork ribs involve a lot more vigorous chewing. Before taking to the brights lights of Broadway in Nashville, Tenn., I line up for an hour at Edley's Bar-B-Que, a roadside barbecue ranch, for hard-crusted charcoal crunchy ribs that are more familiar, though less gratifying, to my British palate.

In Memphis, I discover one reason why former resident Elvis Presley's weight ballooned — the irresistible dry rub of Charlie Vergos' Rendezvous.

The pork ribs initially look so parched I think they'll grate my mouth like I had licked tarmac. But when the Cajun coating is ripped apart, juice spurts free to reveal easily chewable, pink-lined meat.

Elvis was not the only king to eat at Rendezvous. Long before U.S. President Barack Obama and former U.S. presidents George W. Bush and Bill Clinton visited, it welcomed civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., who was shot a short walk away at the Lorraine Motel, which now houses the National Civil Rights Museum.

After a few hours of solemn American history, I eat at the nearby Central BBQ, where sauce is shunned in favour of a traditional Tennessee dry rub.

"The first week I worked here, an old man in the back said, 'Tom, sauce is what you put on the meat you screw up. You're not going to screw up my meat, are you?'" says Thomas Strange, who has been the restaurant's manager for the past three years.

Strange advises where to go next in search of America's other main barbecue meat. "I make the best brisket in Memphis," he says. "It's still not a brisket town. Texas comes here for pork, we go there for beef."

Soon, I'm driving on 10-lane highways past gun ranges and signs warning me I'm going to hell. I'm in Texas, where locals brim with barbecue patriotism, almost as devoted to the fat-lined brisket as the Stars and Stripes on their porches.

At Pizzitola's BBQ in Houston, the waitress hears my Scottish accent and decides I should read the menu and she will order for me. "You'll love the brisket and then you'll love me," Cindy Amolochitis says. Well, she is half right. Like the locals, the Texas brisket warmly embraces you. The state slogan says you shouldn't mess with Texas, and they don't mess with the meat, save for a smattering of salt and black pepper.

From the well-established mom-and-pop joint of Houston, I go to La Barbecue, a gleaming new food truck in Austin. The lineup is continuously 60-strong on a Wednesday morning.

On the benches of La Barbecue's lot, suited lawyers tear beef and pork ribs next to unemployed students. Rich to poor, black to white, Detroit to Texas, barbecue is the great equalizing obsession in a deeply splintered country.

Smoketown USA owner Eric Gould adds a 1-2-3 rub combo of salt, pepper and granulated garlic that packs a flavourful punch. DAVID BATEMAN/FOR TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

TRAVEL NOTES THE BLUES AND A VIEW

Elvis's Hawaii haunt gets a facelift

Work has finally begun on rebuilding the storied resort where Elvis Presley's character got married in the 1961 film Blue Hawaii, decades after a major hurricane damaged its buildings. The company redeveloping Coco Palms Resort began demolishing structures this week. It hopes to re-open the hotel in mid-2018. It initially opened in 1953 next to a historic coconut grove and an ancient Hawaiian fishpond. The grounds were once home to Kauai's last queen.

Penn Station's off-the-rails thriller

Catching a train at New York's crowded Penn Station is no thrill. But a development team has proposed a novel plan to overhaul the station: Build a 1,200-foot thrill ride on top of it and pay for renovations by charging $35 a ticket. Plans were submitted after Democratic Gov. Andrew Cuomo put out a request in January for proposals to renovate the rail hub, which handles more than 650,000 passengers daily, he called "a blight on the greatest city in the world." Sweden is your oyster in Gothenburg

SEAFOOD

Former shipping town reinvents itself

Vawn Himmelsbach
For Torstar News Service

Stepping into the fish market, I wish I had put more effort into my hair and makeup. Sure, people come here to buy fish — but this is Scandinavia. And as I'm discovering, they do things differently here.

Feskekörka literally means "fish church" in Swedish.

Built in 1874, this market was designed to look like a Norwegian stave church, with slanted eaves and arched windows — a testament to the importance of fishing in the port city of Gothenburg.

But stepping into feskekörka isn't exactly a trip back in time. With its clean lines and white-painted wood, it reflects the Scandinavian sense of modern, minimalist cool. There's no fishy smell. And it's as spic and span as a doctor's office.

Walking past the neatly arranged displays of salmon, mackerel, herring and bass to the end of the market hall, I climb a flight of stairs leading to Restaurant Gabriel. But there are no wrinkled, weathered fishermen here — instead, the place is run by young Swedes with hipster beards and plenty of ink. And they're serious about their seafood.

This is where you can find the rare Swedish oyster. "It's a delicacy from the west coast but it's very hard to find," said foodie guide Jesper Adolfsson, who runs a tour company called Matvandringen (matvandringen.se). "This is one of only two or three places where you can get it in Sweden."

Indeed, only about 400 oysters are harvested on the west coast of Sweden each week. The Klem-

HAGA DISTRICT

In the Haga district and the blocks around pedestrian-friendly Magasinsgatan, you'll discover trendy Swedish brands alongside galleries, coffee bars and hidden nooks with popup lunchtime dance parties. Look for the "secret" Victoriapassagen, a lane between Vallgatan and Södra Larmgatan, where you can sample Sweden's best chocolate from Flickorna Kanold.

ming brothers, Bengt and Peter, run a diving company and are responsible for harvesting the oyster beds that lie on the privately owned sea floor between Hamburgsund and Strömstad. They supply about 80 to 90 per cent of Sweden's oysters, and most of them end up at Restaurant Gabriel.

Johan Malm, the restaurant's chef and proprietor, also happens to be the winner of the 2010 Galway World Oyster Opening Championships. At his restaurant, I sample one of these rare flat oysters. I'm instructed not to swallow it whole, like I'm accustomed to — in Sweden, diners chew their oysters, and they don't add any toppings such as horseradish or a squeeze of lemon.

And I don't need any. After all, the seafood here is considered some of the best in the world, thanks to the clean, icy cold waters, where fish take longer to grow and develop fuller flavours.

The oyster goes down well with a thick, dark Ostronporter — a porter-style beer brewed with actual oysters (if you want to go really wild, try "black velvet," a mix of Ostronporter and Champagne).

The fish church — like the rest of Gothenburg — is a surprise. Sweden's second-largest city was once known for its shipyards, but that all came to a dramatic end in the '70s, when the shipping industry moved to China. The demise of its shipyards "left the riverbank deserted and empty and we have had to reinvent our identity," said Gothenburg guide Erika Svenske.

Vawn Himmelsbach was hosted by Eurail, which didn't review or approve this story.

Dyke March broadens its focus

PRIDE FESTIVAL

This year Black Lives Matter honoured, plus Orlando tribute

Tanya Enberg

Much has changed in the two decades since Toronto's first official Dyke March took place with an estimated 50 participants.

The political demonstration was organized to give rise to lesbian voices and promote inclusiveness, and was carried out on a budget of about $50.

"It started as a protest against Pride not having specific dyke spaces," explained Jaime Martino, operations director and staff liaison of Dyke March, an event she credits to a team of hardworking volunteers.

"Much like marginalized groups within a marginalized group advocate for their right to be included, that is often seen as divisiveness, so there were many of those reactions to the first Dyke March as well. Many members of the gay male community were supportive, but many were not. It takes time, and of course female spaces are important generally, and especially important within marginalized communities."

Fast forward 20 years and Dyke March now draws an estimated 10,000 folks and is part of official Pride Festival programming, unlike similar marches in many other cities around the world.

Black Lives Matter is the honoured group for Pride and will lead the 20th anniversary march this year.

"When we announce things like that, there's an inevitable backlash with people who say, 'I don't understand what this has to do with Pride or the Dyke March, this isn't our fight.' To that I say, yes of course it is. First of all in the broader theoretical sense of oppression being linked and communities working together to end the oppression that affects us all, but also in the more specific sense: Of course there are queer black people. It only makes sense to us to solidify that awareness."

As the march itself continually evolves, so do the issues that take the forefront.

What is revealed are the multiple layers that exist within a highly diverse community.

For instance, recently we've witnessed a growing awareness of the challenges facing transgender people.

"The politics of the Dyke March has followed similar paths as many other social justice movements," said Martino.

"As we dig deeper into issues, as we broaden the focus of our activism to better include marginalized people within already marginalized communities, conversations get more nuanced and complicated. One of the biggest progressions, I think, is the ongoing shift in the way we talk and think about gender. Trans folks have been left out of the conversations until very recently, and the work to centre those voices is ongoing. What does it mean to be a woman-only space? How does increased understanding of a spectrum of gender change the way we talk about the spaces the Dyke March creates?"

As a tribute to the shooting rampage at a gay nightclub in Orlando, that left 49 people dead and injured 53 on June 12, Craft Action TO, a craftivist affiliate of Dyke March, is creating a memorial piece. A moment of silence is also scheduled to take place during the rally, as well as speeches and performances by Raging Asian Women, Shawnee Talbot, Elder Shirley Kendall, and the Hidden River Singers.

Simmons takes the No. 1 spot

NBA

76ers draft Australian first overall

The Philadelphia 76ers selected LSU freshman Ben Simmons with the No. 1 pick Thursday night as the NBA draft opened with three straight freshmen.

The 76ers grabbed the versatile six-foot-10 forward from Australia who averaged 19.2 points, 11.8 rebounds and 4.8 assists to become the only player in SEC history to finish in the top five in all three categories.

He comes with some questions — he made only one three-pointer — but too much potential for the 76ers to pass up with their first No. 1 pick since taking Allen Iverson 20 years ago.

"It feels amazing, honestly," Simmons said. "I can't even — my legs were shaking when I was on stage."

Jamal Murray of Kitchener, Ont., was selected seventh overall by the Denver Nuggets.

The Toronto Raptors took Jakob Poeltl with the ninth pick.

to Brooklyn's Barclays Center loudly cheered the selection in hopes that Simmons can help them move forward after three straight dismal seasons, including a 10-72 finish in 2015-16 that was just a game better than the worst ever in the 82-game schedule.

The last No. 1 pick from LSU was Shaquille O'Neal, who will be enshrined in the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame along with Iverson in September.

The Los Angeles Lakers, picking second for the second consecutive year, took Duke's Brandon Ingram, who averaged 17.3 points as the ACC freshman of the year. He becomes the latest young player on a team that will begin life without the retired Kobe Bryant next season.

"I'm just going to be myself," Ingram said. "Whatever I can do to impact the game, whatever the coach needs me to do, I'm going to do it."

The Boston Celtics then began a busy night by picking California forward Jaylen Brown. Boston had eight picks in the two-round draft, starting with one it acquired from Brooklyn in 2013 in the deal that sent Kevin Garnett and Paul Pierce to the Nets.

Croatian Dragan Bender ended the run of freshmen when the Phoenix Suns selected the 7-1 forward who has been playing professionally for Maccabi Tel Aviv. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NHL DRAFT

Eyes of hockey world set to turn to No. 1-holding Maple Leafs

While Auston Matthews came to grips with the very real possibility that he will — in very short order — be a Maple Leaf, general manager Lou Lamoriello was asked how important this NHL draft was in his 30 years of selecting teenaged hockey players.

"It's pretty well up there," said Lamoriello, smiling before a phalanx of reporters.

While the Leafs have picked high in recent years, no draft is more important to the rebuilding of this Original Six franchise than this one in Buffalo starting Friday night. The only other time the Leafs picked first overall was 1985, choosing a future captain in Wendel Clark.

"Any time you have the ability to take the best player in the draft in your opinion, it means quite a bit," Lamoriello said. "You're not waiting for someone else to take a player."

"There's no question we expect a lot out of the player we're getting, but certainly not right away. We have to respect this game, and the NHL, and the ability of the players. You take an 18-year-old and to expect him to do wonders, it's not fair."

Presumed No. 1 pick Auston Matthews. GETTY IMAGES

It's a once-in-a-lifetime thing ... I definitely don't take it for granted.

Auston Matthews

The Leafs started their tear-down in January 2015 and hit rock bottom this season, giving them the chance to take Matthews, who has been favourably compared to Hall of Famer Peter Forsberg and retiring Red Wings star Pavel Datsyuk.

"Obviously it's an Original Six team," the Arizona-raised Matthews said. "Like I've said before, it's the hockey mecca of the world there in Toronto. So it'd be pretty special to have the opportunity to play for them. So it's a pretty exciting perspective."

Lamoriello would not confirm the Leafs will take Matthews. Finnish star Patrik Laine is rated second. Lamoriello also said the team has not tipped its hat towards any player available in the draft. But the front office has settled on a name.

"I think we know who we're going to pick," said Lamoriello, adding there is "no dissension."

Last year, there was a split in the ranks between slick but undersized forward Mitch Marner and NHL-ready defenceman Noah Hanifin when the Leafs picked fourth overall. They chose Marner, who played in the OHL this year. Hanifin, selected by the Carolina Hurricanes, played in the NHL.

And the pick won't be traded. "I wouldn't get into any discussions about talks with other teams," Lamoriello said. "Right now, we'll be picking. We'll be picking our picks."

Matthews would join a core of young players — including Marner and William Nylander — and be expected to help lead the team out of its abyss.

"I think I know I'm ready for whatever happens," said Matthews. "I just want to take it one step at a time. For me I want to focus on myself and on the team and whatever I can do to get better every day and learn as much as possible." TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Battle of the Brits EURO 2016 ROUND OF 16

In five transformational years, Wales and Northern Ireland have gone from playing in front of 529 fans to preparing for a British derby in the 45,000-capacity Parc des Princes in Paris.

And rather than a meaningless friendly, as the 2011 fixture was, this time Wales and Northern Ireland will be meeting in the round of 16 at the European Championship.

No longer a soccer sideshow, these small British nations will take centre stage Saturday. There will even be an English referee, with Premier League official Martin Atkinson taking charge.

The start of the knockout phase is uncharted territory for Wales and Northern Ireland as they make unexpected progress on their debuts in UEFA's continental showpiece.

"It's another new challenge," new

GOALKEEPER
Hannes Halldorsson (ICL)

experience," Wales forward Gareth Bale said, "and one I'm sure everybody will relish."

Few will relish facing Bale. The Real Madrid forward has taken to tournament soccer effortlessly, already the joint-leading scorer with three goals. Although Wales was beaten by England, Chris Coleman's side still advanced as Group B winners.

Northern Ireland will be a different proposition to England, less ambitious going forward and more dogged at the back.

"We've got one of the best defences in the tournament," Northern Ireland forward

Kyle Lafferty said. "I don't think they've been given enough praise for what they've done. It's going to be a tough game, but hopefully we'll be celebrating at the end."
